This precluded any remedy by fixation of maximum prices. The measures taken by the Government restricting exportation failed to prevent further advance in local wholesale prices. An investigation showed that the margin was in favor of export trade. Retailers claimed that the average cost of running a retail grocery business was 12 per cent on the turnover, and that they were handling butter at a loss. After an exhaustive investigation the board came to the conclusion that the retail price should not be allowed to rise indefinitely and recommended a fixed price throughout Xew Zealand; the prohibition of export of butter and cheese, except under license on certain terms and conditions; fixed maximum wholesale price, from time to time, for butter for local consumption, and limiting distribution charges. The board prepared a scheme in consonance with the above recommendations. This was approved by the Government, and on October 13, 1916, regulations were gazetted. The validity of this action was tested in the Supreme Court, which declared the Order in Council to be valid in all respects. The fund derived from licenses shall be returned to the contributing factories, less expenses of administration. The scheme is said to be working satisfactorily. The investigation of the meat supply showed a gradual change in the proportion of each kind of beef slaughtered. The following table shows this variation by years, 1913 to 1917, at the Auckland abattoirs: April to October, 7 months. For the first and...
