Excerpt: . . . on, in May, 1910, the defendant Kimball was elected a director in place of the defendant Hodgson. The defendant Michener moved to Victoria early in 1909, and became sales-agent for the companys coal. The defendant Kimball, practically the only member of the directorate who had paid cash for his shares, lived in New York and did not attend board meetings. Friction, however, developed, and an antagonism between what may be called the Victoria group, represented on the board by the defendants Arbuthnot and Savage (for Moran though a director did not attend in person) and the New York group, represented by the defendants Wishard, Michener, and Kimball. Of the New York group, however, the defendant Michener was the only one on the ground, so to speak, and he could exercise little influence. His investments in the company were out of commissions on the sale...
