Excerpt: . . . ENGLISH LESSON Third Year in Five-Year Course Introductory Note This is the second of a series of four lessons on the ballad, the object of which was to furnish a background for the study of The Rime of the Ancient Mariner and other narrative poems. It was not the intention to study any one of the poems in detail, but to build up an appreciation of the objective popular appeal of the old ballads, the sympathetic and personal note of the later ones, and an understanding of the simpler details of the ballad form. The four lessons were as follows: i. The old ballads Seward, Narrative and Lyric Poems, PP-3-19- 2. The modern ballads Seward, Narrative and Lyric Poems, pp. 20-35. 3. Memorizing from poems studied in class. Discussion of meter. 4. Three or more original stanzas in ballad meter. Teacher: Before we begin...
